

Nanoscience and the ONR/DoN Science and Technology Process

John Pazik
Office of Naval Research
Arlington, VA

As the agency responsible for Department of Navy Science & Technology programs, the Office of Naval Research supports research projects at universities and industry across the nation. Nanoscience and technology is one of many areas receiving investment from ONR. While nanoscience and technology has gained great popularity over the past several years, ONR has traditionally been a long-term supporter of this area. Support of nanoscience based research emanates from a variety of programs within ONR but in particular in the physical sciences, electronics, and biological sciences divisions.